

WHAT IS CLAIMED IS:

- 5           1.    An electronic device operable to capture image information comprising:
              an input sensor operable to receive optical information in association with providing a digital image;
- 10               a memory operably coupled to the image sensor, the memory operable to store image information associated with the digital image;
- a process reference stored within the memory and operable to be associated with the image 15           information, the process reference including a reference for updating a website using the image information.